

One of the things that makes cults start up in the first place is an inability of some to accept things which aren't easy to understand like the Trinity or hell or the desire to teach in a public school. And nonbelievers are often nonbelievers because of an unfulfillable need to understand everything before they believe. Where's all this leading? It's thinking cap time!

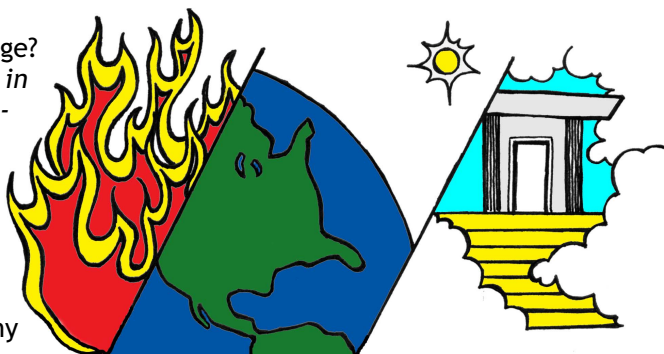

ONE REASON CHRISTIANITY IS BELIEVABLE IS BECAUSE IT INCLUDES THINGS WHICH ARE BEYOND REASON.

Got that? If our faith is really of the real God of the universe, we should expect there to be things we cannot fully understand. If we could understand everything about our God, that would imply our God is man-made, a god-in-a-box. But the Bible mentions things, without a hint of embarrassment, very matter-of-factly, which are beyond space and time as we know it. Like what?! Like, I thought you'd never ask!

Like a heaven & hell which can't be pointed to, like the creation of time itself, like the Trinity, like the risen Jesus just appearing out of nowhere, like all of mankind's sins being put on Him at His death, like angels & demons, like God being everywhere all the time, like predestination & free will *simultaneously, like millions of prayers being heard simultaneously, like a New Creation being "prepared" but which isn't in this universe. Like, that enough for now? ;)

But these can happen (and be partially understood!) if there are extra dimensions of space & time. Are there dimensions beyond those we live in? Science says yes! And if science says so, it must be the Truth! Kidding! Cosmologists say there are at least 10 dimensions of space & 2 dimensions of time!

Bottom line on this page? There are major beliefs in our faith which are impossible if all that exists are the 3 dimensions of space and the one dimension of time we live in. But there are many more dimensions, which allow many strange things (like everything on the list above) to be possible even if we can't fully grasp them! We've just discovered these extra dimensions in the last 100 years, the Bible has been quietly teaching of their existence for 1000's of years. Surprise.

Let's look more closely at a couple things which are extradimensional, fundamental beliefs for us, but a thorn in the side of major cults:

the Trinity and heaven & hell.
